The Honorable Jamieson Greer
United States Trade Representative
600 17th Street, NW
Washington, DC 20508

Dear Secretary Rollins, Secretary Bessent, Secretary Lutnick, and Ambassador Greer,

Thank you in advance for hearing our concerns. The undersigned U.S. hardwood companies and organizations – representing the employees, businesses, and communities who rely on our industry – write to you today to request that the administration prioritize the U.S. hardwood industry as you continue to negotiate new trade agreements, particularly with China. Barring successful deals that include hardwood interests, we seek federal support to sustain our operations until negotiations succeed.

The U.S. hardwood industry is a quintessentially American sector that has long served as the backbone of rural communities across the country, including those in Appalachia, the Northeast, the Midwest, and the Northwest. Thousands of family-owned mills support 1.8 million good-paying, hands-on jobs and generate critical economic activity in rural and underserved regions.

Our sector is fully integrated from logging to the manufacture of finished consumer goods such as flooring, cabinets, furniture, and moldings. Hardwood products like industrial mats, shipping pallets, and railway ties are vital to U.S. economic growth and national security, while residual chips and dust from our mills fuel essential products including paper, tissue, sanitary supplies, and wood pellets. The strength of the U.S. hardwood industry is inseparable from the health of our public and private forestlands and the vitality of rural America.

Unfortunately, the industry faces extraordinary challenges. Prior to 2018, hardwood lumber was the second most exported U.S. product to China, behind only soybeans. When China imposed retaliatory tariffs that year, American hardwood exporters lost half their market share to competitors in Russia, Thailand, Malaysia, and elsewhere. Even once those tariffs receded, regaining those markets has proven extraordinarily difficult.

Since 2018, lost commercial opportunities total more than $9 billion, weakening sawmills, logging operations, and lumberyards across the country. While many agricultural producers received targeted relief to offset retaliatory tariffs, the hardwood industry did not.

Over the past few years, U.S. hardwood exports have continued to decline, further devastating a fragile industry. From 2022-2024:

- Hardwood exports product exports decreased $930 million.
- Hardwood lumber exports fell 20% or $663 million.
- Hardwood log exports declined 11% or $209 million.
- The hardwood industry lost 40,000 jobs (down 10%).

We fear that additional retaliatory tariffs and more trade uncertainty could devastate the industry beyond repair. Many operations across the country have already closed this year, while others are surviving only by scaling back. In either case, we have seen layoffs of good-paying American jobs in communities where those job opportunities are limited.

If the sector contracts further due to diminished international market access, we risk losing the critical mass of production capacity required to sustain this foundational industry – an industry that has historically generated a significant trade surplus with China and the rest of the world. The collapse of the U.S. furniture sector is a sobering example that once an industry is gone, it is very difficult and costly to rebuild.

We strongly support the Administration's efforts to reshore American manufacturing but urge you not to overlook a foundational upstream industry that would make that possible.

Should tariff relief programs become necessary, we urge the administration to include the U.S. hardwood sector, to safeguard rural jobs, secure a sustainable domestic supply chain, and preserve a proud American industry for generations to come. Like American farmers, hardwood industry workers overwhelmingly believe in this Administration and your work to support rural America. However, like many farmers, they are also facing economic realities that are unsustainable without a lifeline that only the Administration can provide.

For centuries, the U.S. hardwood industry has embodied hard work, innovation, and tradition, passed down through American families. As you negotiate trade agreements in the coming weeks and months, particularly with China, we respectfully urge you to prioritize the U.S. hardwood industry, ensure our sector has equitable access to relief programs, and preserve our ability to compete globally. Doing so will allow us to continue supporting American families, communities, and forestlands well into the future.

Sincerely,
